

TUESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1744.

Turin, January 21.

SINCE the Return of Admiral Mathew, to Nice, he has, in Conjunction with the Marquis de Suz, who has the Command in this Province, made several Dispositions for strengthening the Forts, and augmenting the Redoubts and Batteries already erected for that Purpose. Four Battalions also of fresh Troops have marched thither, viz. two Battalions of the Regiment of Sicily, and two of another Regiment; and two Battalions more are to be sent for from Sardinia. His Majesty has had private Intelligence from Savoy, that the sudden Turn made in the French Politics, and the Eagerness with which they support the Projects of the Queen of Spain, are entirely owing to a late Convention, by which the Spaniards yield up that Duchy to the French. All the Letters from France are full of nothing but the mighty Force of their Naval Armament; and yet they cannot persuade us here, that they have any real Intention to come out and fight the English. We rather imagine, that the great Effort will be made by Land; and if any thing is done by Sea, it will be by stealing over small Bodies of Troops, as Occasion offers, to join the Army of Don Philip. The King, at all Events, will be provided for them; having already contracted for 5000 German Troops, which are to be allowed a Passage thro' Tyrol.

Berlin, January 21. His Majesty entering Yesterday into the 33d Year of his Age, the Queen-Mother, upon that Occasion, gave a grand Entertainment to all the Royal Family. We have private Intelligence from Petersburg, that an Express has been sent from thence to Paris, to insist upon M. d'Allion's being recalled; who, as he was never very well received, so, of late, is become disagreeable to such a degree, that it is resolved to be rid of him at any Rate. The Affair of the Marquis de Botta seems to be asleep for the present, but we guess from some Enquiries that have lately been made here, that it will not remain long in that Condition. The Imperial Minister lately presented a Memorial, in which he very strongly insists on the Necessity of establishing an Imperial Army of Neutrality, sufficient to prevent either the French, or the Allies, from entering the Territories of the Empire next Campaign. The Equipage of Count Rosenberg is in part arrived here, so that the Report spread, as if the Queen of Hungary would not send another Minister hither, appears to be absolutely groundless. Field-Marshal Count Seckendorff is actually gone to Dresden, in order, as some say, to negotiate a Match between the Imperial and Saxon Families.

Ratisbon, January 27. The Complaints that have been made at the Court of Vienna, in relation to some Male-Administration in the Electorate of Bavaria, have met there with as much Attention as could be expected; a Committee having been immediately appointed to examine into the Affair, and to do the People Justice. There has been of late a Story whispered here, as if a Proposition had been made, for obtaining the Austrian Netherlands, in virtue of an Equivalent for her Hungarian Majesty; but of what Nature this Equivalent is, or whether in Germany or in Italy, is not specified. There is, perhaps, nothing more at Bottom, than the Revival of an old Overture made by France, for granting those Provinces to the Emperor, in Satisfaction of his Pretensions on the Austrian Succession, as well as in Consideration of a great Part of Bavaria to be added to the Territories of the Queen of Hungary on that Side. All the Magazines, and the fortified Places of that Electorate, are full, the Garisons complete, and every Thing in so good a Posture of Defence, that if the Emperor and his Allies should enter it again with 100,000 Men, they would find it a very difficult Matter to penetrate farther than Ingolstadt; and therefore the common Opinion here is, that the Theatre of War will be rather in the Brisgau than in Bavaria; tho' some imagine, that by means of the Imperial Army of Neutrality, Peace will be this Year preserved in Germany, and the Scene of Action transferred to Flanders, where they are preparing for an early Campaign on both Sides.

We are informed, that Advices are lately arrived from Admiral Mathews, importing, that he has with him 34 Ships of the Line, well Mann'd, and in good Condition; that he is perfectly ready to give the French and Spaniards a warm Reception, and does not at all fear to give a good Account of them, if they should venture to attack him.

His Prussian Majesty has lately published an Edict, by which he prohibits all his Vassals, and even the Inhabitants of the several Provinces in his Dominions, from going out of them on any Pretence whatsoever, without his Permission.

Extract of a Letter from Bilbao, January 25, 1744.

The Great Begona, of this Place, has taken a Snow, which is off the Bar, and said to be loaded with Rum and Sugar; but farther Particulars are not known. The Little Begona is likewise arrived, having lost her Bow-sprit and Foremast in an Engagement with an English Ship, with three of her Men kill'd, and seventeen wounded, having first put 54 Men on board the English Ship, but doth not know whether they made themselves Masters of her or not, for there was no Signal made; by which it is thought they were overpowered. I have since heard, that the Snow above-mentioned was bound from Gibraltar, and within eight Days has been taken and retaken; and that the Mate of the Man of War that retook her, is on board; but as to other Particulars of her Loading cannot learn.
